Want to change the world? Start by exploring multiple perspectives: global, cultural, national ...

So you think you have issues? Now think about the challenges and opportunities for the global community or even different regions of the world.

Why UMD

- Flexibility to choose your own focus from a long list of electives, covering many different disciplines, including Anthropology, Art History, Communications, Political Science ...
- Numerous short-term study abroad program opportunities through CLA and other College departments.
- INTS faculty who are known internationally, leaders in their fields, and who care about students.

Acquired Skills

Ability to influence mutually acceptable agreements by understanding issues from a variety of perspectives.

Career Possibilities

Every career requires a knowledge of world affairs. Our minors have majors from across UMD and have a wide variety of careers, including advocacy, business, government, the military, law, and teaching.