Interested in the interrelationship of biological, physical, and cultural systems? The Master of Tribal Resource & Environmental Stewardship (MTRES) is an applied degree for current or future tribal leaders. Your courses in MTRES will prepare you to be a leader in tribal natural resources and environmental programs.

Why UMD

Partially online course delivery including several face-to-face meetings each semester provides interaction with experts in each area of the curriculum including faculty, staff, special guests, and students.

Scholarships

Scholarships and Awards for MTRES students

Requirements

In addition to the general application instructions provided by the Graduate School, visit the MTRES program page for specific application instructions and deadlines related to the program. Also visit the catalog requirements page linked above for additional information.