Community College Teaching Graduate Certificate

College of Education and Human Service Professions

Why UMD

The Community College Teaching Graduate (also called post-baccalaureate) Certificate provides an opportunity for students to learn how to be effective teachers in a college setting. This is an excellent additional credential for students planning to teach after graduating. Depending on the program, UMD students can pursue this certificate concurrently with their master's or doctoral degree.

Requirements

Applicants to this program must have a bachelor's degree. In addition to the general application instructions provided by the Graduate School, visit the Community College Teaching graduate certificate application instruction page for information specific to the program. See the course requirements link in the left sidebar for additional information.
