The museum studies certificate unites history, theory, and practical learning in a curriculum that prepares participants for professional or volunteer careers in administration, collections, and specialty disciplines within museums, archives, tribal collections, zoos, aquariums, parks, and botanical gardens.

Why UMD

This program provides, in both a museum and classroom environment, the basic scholarship and functional training to equip you with the skills necessary to assume professional entry-level museum positions.

Requirements

This certificate is not eligible for financial aid. The current tuition rates can be found on UMD's Tuition page. Students should submit their applications through the online form.

See the University Studies program or contact the program director, David Woodward, for more information.

Where the possibilities are endless. We will be your compass.
